

October Update from Collective Memories

Focus on our Family Charts

Helping older Australians live for today while remembering their past

At Collective Memories we have developed a range of wonderful wall charts and this month we are focusing on personalisation for your residents and home based clients.

Our four wall charts are ready to be placed on the wall in a room allowing carers or visitors to get a better understanding about the person or resident.

The All About Me chart provides a snapshot of someone's life, things that are important to them, a brief family history, including like's and dislikes, their goals with space for photos and captions, allowing carers and visitors to get a better understanding about their client, perfect for those one time services.

The Ancestral Family Tree looks back to parents, grandparents and great grandparents. This chart is designed to help the person to remember their ancestry, with space for photos and family details.

The Year of my Birth is a wonderful personalised snapshot of the year of their birth, what was making headlines in Australia and around the world.

A4 size $15

My Family Tree wall chart looks forward from the person's birth. Personalised stickers are included for the following family members, me, my partner, my parents, my parents parents, our children, grand children and great grandchildren. A great way to help someone remember their loved ones at a glance.

*Collective Memories has partnered with Danielle from DR Care Solutions who provide Aged Care & Disability Care Solutions around Australia: Danielle shares updated tips and information regarding aged care, which you may find relevant in your aged care environment.

A brilliant brain exercise activity from Danielle; several weekends ago I read of a brilliant weekly brain exercise undertaken at an over-50s resort in Queensland. It takes the form of a writing group called "Quills" and I'm suggesting you might like to consider setting up one of your own.

"Quills" is not about teaching creative writing or critiquing work. It is about exercising your brain and having fun with others while doing so.
